

This is the first heading, it is at level 1

This is the second heading, it is at level 2

This is the third heading, it is at level 3

We can add text to headings with `add_text()`, just as we can add text to paragraphs. New headings can be added at any level. The argument `smart_ws` is used to control how whitespace is handled in headings just as in paragraphs.

`new_heading()` also obeys the arguments `bold` and `italic`, just as in paragraphs. However, they make less sense for headings. Explicitly setting `bold` or `italic` on a heading may not produce the expected readability, as the heading has formatting from the heading definition that is specific to the output format.

The fourth heading is again at level 2